PREFACE TO THE TWELFTH EDITION.

IN this edition the Pocket Dictionary has been revised in every part. Several hundred new terms have been defined with a view to keeping the book up to date. The vocabulary of medicine and the allied sciences continues to grow with great rapidity, and constant revision is necessary to keep a dictionary abreast of the times. Additions have been most numerous in biological chemistry, endocrinology, neurology, and immunology. The rapidly growing vocabulary of dental science has also received special attention.

PREFACE.

THIS small volume is the outcome of a need for a pocket dictionary which, though handy in size, should be so full and complete as to supply the wants of the practising physician no less than those of the student of medicine. It is not the editor's intention to attempt to take the place of the larger dictionaries indispensable to a thorough understanding of the language of medicine, but he has striven to develop the possibilities of the pocket lexicon to a degree not heretofore attained.

The chief aim has been to make the selection of words as complete as possible. To this end the larger dictionaries have been freely used, and a systematic gleanings has been made through the latest medical literature, so that the vocabulary may be said to be strictly up to date. Of necessity the definitions of terms are brief, but the endeavor has been to make them clear, adequate, and to the point.

The order of arrangement of matter is strictly alphabetical. In cases of a phrase, consisting of a noun and qualifying adjective, the definition will usually be found under the noun, under which all the phrases containing that noun have been grouped.

Besides the ordinary dictionary words it has seemed desirable to insert a considerable amount of matter in tabular form. This matter, it is believed, will prove of value to students for memorizing in preparing for examinations, besides serving to group correlated facts in a convenient form for quick consultation.

PREFACE.

This small volume is the outcome of a hard-fought struggle, a struggle which, though hardly in any sense a full and complete one, has supplied the wants of the profession, and has been no less than those of the student of medicine. It is not the editor's intention to attempt to take the place of the larger dictionaries published in a foreign country, or of the language of medicine, but to give a service to the student of the profession of the medical profession, to a degree not previously attained.

The editor has been in the selection of words as complete as possible. To this end the largest dictionary has been used, and a systematic plan has been made through the latest medical literature, so that the dictionary may be said to be strictly up to date. Of necessity, the definition of terms is brief, but the editor has tried to make them clear, adequate, and to the point.

The order of arrangement of matter is strictly alphabetical. In cases of a phrase, consisting of a noun and qualifying adjective, the definition will usually be found under the noun, words which all the phrases containing that noun have been grouped.

Finally, the author's dictionary is not a complete dictionary, but a complete dictionary of the medical profession. This matter, it is believed, will prove of value to students for memorizing in preparing for examination, besides serving to give correlated facts in a convenient form for quick consultation.

The chemical transformations in the protoplasm are carried on by these lateral chains (receptors). The lateral chains contain a group (haptophore group) which is capable of uniting with similar groups (haptophore groups) in toxins, bacterial cells, and foreign cells. As the lateral chains are seized upon by the foreign cells, the stable central group is stimulated to produce new lateral chains (receptors) which are thrown off into the body-juices. These side chains constitute intermediary bodies. The intermediary bodies (called also ceptor, haptine, immune body, sensitizer, fixative, preparative, and desmon) are designated, according to their nature, as uniceptors and amboceptors. The uniceptors, represented by the antitoxins, produce their effect by seizing the toxin by means of its haptophore group. The amboceptors, represented by the cytolytins and bacteriolysins, have two affinities, one for the invading foreign cells, and one for a body called the complement, end-body, or addiment, which exists normally in the body-juices. The complement, when united with the bacteria or foreign cells by the amboceptor, is capable of causing solution of the bacteria or cells by means of a toxophore or zymotoxite group.

A TABLE OF DOSES
IN BOTH APOTHECARIES' AND METRIC SYSTEMS

VETERINARY DOSE TABLE

A TABLE OF DOSES

IN BOTH APOTHECARIES' AND METRIC SYSTEMS.

The following doses are intended for adults. The dose for a child may be obtained approximately by Young's rule: Divide the age by the age plus 12, which will give the fraction of the adult dose to be used for the child. Thus, for a child of four years, $\frac{4}{4+12} = \frac{1}{4}$, and the dose is $\frac{1}{4}$ that for an adult.

Narcotics should be given in only one-half this proportion, while cathartics may be employed in two or three times this proportion. For hypodermic use the dose should be one-half of that by the mouth; by the rectum, five-fourths of the same.

In the following table gr. = grains, dr. = drams, m. = minims, oz. = ounces. The doses in the metric system are either grams or cubic centimeters.
